

Anastasia Xydeas-Kikemenis Associate Professor of Occupational Health

Mrs. Anastasia Xydeas-Kikemenis studied Microbiology and Genetics at the Faculty of Biology of the University of Saarland (Germany). She pursued her postgraduate studies in the fields of Public Health, Sociology of Health, Toxicology and Ergomotricity.

She has also participated to educational seminars on Occupational Health in France and Germany. She acquired the title of instructor trainers of the Dotte-Manutention Method of patient's handling in France, for which she was scientifically responsible for Greece.

From April 1990 to 2018, she worked as a research and teaching fellow at the National school of Public Health and coordinated the postgraduate programs. Since September 2018, she is associate Professor of Occupational Health and from May 2019 she belongs to the Teaching and Research Staff of the Dpt. of Public Health Policy of the School of Public Health of the University of West Attica.

She has participated to Greek and European epidemiological studies and also to the elaboration of research and educational programs.

Since 1994, she teaches topics related to Health and Safety at Work to nursing schools, Hospitals and municipality Authorities; she undertakes the realization of occupational risk's special training programs; she supervises many theses; she is member of commissions in student's selection, evaluation of educational programs and study guides.